Fr. Banet Keeps Busy Schedule As Pres., Priest

He is seldom seen on campus by students, but he's the boss. He makes the final decisions. Many students do not know who he is. They just know; Father Banet is President of Saint Joseph's College, period.

Born in Fort Wayne, Indiana, Father Banet attended Central Catholic High School. He then went on to study for the priesthood at St Joe College and St Charles Seminary in Ohio.

college and brought it national recognition. First was the addition of women to the college student population, greatly increasing the number of potential students. Secondly was the adoption and development of the core program. Both changes created a new environment and prevented a threatening stagnation of progress. Today Father Banet still has a full calendar. He works directly with the vice-presidents on a day to day basis.

He doesn't interfere with the different offices run by vice-presidents but they will not act against his approval. He must also deal directly with civil and federal authorities, and the media. He is constantly giving talks and making presentations to alumni, advisory committees and different foundations in order to raise the St Joe College endowment.

He is also and most importantly an all purpose priest.

He frequently performs weddings for trustees' children. For the future, he works towards the goal of continual growth of ideas and enthusiasm for St. Joe. He wants to maintain the college's national reputation as a first rate institution by demonstrating that to the students daily.

What free time he does have he loves to spend fishing. Some regard his talents for catching and cleaning fish near pro. And when students leave for the summer he exploits the extra time to take his boat out on Lake Banet and fish away.

Before ascending to the position of President of Saint Joseph's College, Father Banet earned a B.A. from St. Joe and a M.A. from the University of Michigan in library science. He then spent 13 years as the librarian here at the college. He also spent 15 years as rector, first in Seifert Hall then in Bennett Hall. He was in charge of the G.I.s returning from the Korean conflict, to study at St. Joe. In Father Banet's tenure as President, there have been two major decisions that completely changed the academic, athletic, cultural and social atmosphere of the

"The Fantasticks" To Open Tonight

Once again, the Columbian Players of Saint Joseph's College take to the stage as they prepare to perform the musical "The Fantasticks" this coming Parent's Weekend.

There is also no need to give a synopsis of the play, because each person will leave the auditorium with his or her own interpretation of what the play meant to them.

"The Fantasticks" is directed by John Rahe, who also performs as El Gallo, the narrator.

The rest of the cast members include veterans Mark Kroll, Collette Schreiber, Val Ogren, and Mike Hodge; as well as newcomers Mark Randall, Kim Parker-Marsh, and Joan Horvat. Performance dates are October 15, 16 and 17, Parent's Weekend at the college.

For many theater buffs, this show will be quite different as compared to other shows they might have seen. "The Fantasticks" allows the audience to use their imagination and creativity to guide them along throughout the play. For example, there are no scene or costume changes, and many of the props used are imaginary.

Fr. Banet, shown here in his office, worked as a librarian before he took on the role of President.

Poll ...

Have you ever wondered how your fellow St. Joe Pumas felt about things? You know ... things ... different things ... any thing, from football to fashion, A.I.D.s to atheism, core to capitalism, sex to school spirit. Well, an addition to every edition of STUFF this year will be a poll, where you, the college community, will be able to respond, and add your opinion. STUFF boxes will be located outside the cafeteria and the STUFF office for your responses.

This issue, we of the STUFF staff would like to find out what you want to know, what questions you would like to ask the the St. Joe community.

From The Editor's Desk ...

STUFF GOES THROUGH CHANGES

A number of improvements have been made on the Saint Joseph's College campus in the past couple of years. From the Rec Center to dorm renovations, students, faculty and staff have benefited from and helped to maintain a level of excellence within the college community. If change represents growth, then St. Joe's is "rising to the occasion."

In keeping in step with the continued growth of the college, and in order to accommodate its rapid progression, STUFF is going through its own changes. These changes include additional staff positions, a new office location, and most importantly, encouraged input and support from you, the reader.

So that we can cover college events more efficiently, and to provide a more professional setting, we have incorporated five editorial positions in addition to the managing co-editors. The areas covered are news, features, layout/photography, intermural and varsity sports. Weekly staff meetings will be part of their responsibilities in order to provide the student with the best possible publication.

The STUFF office has moved its location to the chapel basement conference room. We hope that students will become as familiar with this location as they are with the cafeteria.

Finally, but we feel most importantly, is the change in input from our readers. Because the SJC students represent the majority of our readership, we believe it is especially important that they feel as much a part of this publication as the staff itself.

Without the support from the readers, any other changes would be inappropriate, and for the most part, a waste of time.

How can you get involved with STUFF? For one, there will be one box placed outside the cafeteria, and one outside the STUFF office. We ask that if you have a letter to the editor about any issue or article you feel strongly about on campus, good or bad, put it in the box and we will respond or publish

Secondly, the editors of STUFF will be taking polls on various issues in each issue, and publish the results. We ask that you answer these questions, and place them in the boxes as well.

This is your chance to get involved. STUFF can only be as good as its readers let it. With strong participation, it will easily keep up with and continue to grow with and hallmark St. Joseph's College.

SJC Campus Sees Changes, Improvements

As the winter semester draws to a close each April, graduates head into society to put their acquired knowledge to use and undergraduates head homeward to their parents, siblings, summerjobs and suntanning and other summer pleasures that await them. All are happy to be putting aside the thoughts of textbooks, term papers, and exams. College fades from their minds, but little thought is given to the fact that this campus is far from being idle. On the Monday following graduation, maintenance crews headed by the director of buildings and grounds, Mr. Fred Plant, began the summer-long task of campus repairs and improvements.

Probably the most noticeable improvements this summer were in Gallagher and Halas Halls where new windows were installed. These windows are the same as were installed in the other dormitories last summer, funded by a loan from the U.S. Department of Education. These windows help reduce drafts and heat loss in the winter months as well as improve the overall looks of the buildings. Gallagher and Halas also received new roofs and plumbing repairs.

Halas, Justin, Merlini, and Seifert Halls received new lounge furniture and hallway carpeting, and the ground floor of East Seifert Hall has been redesigned to accommodate handicapped students. Both Justin Hall and the Administration building received new exterior doors. Most yellow curbs and parking lines were repainted, as were the fire hydrants and campus street lights.

Also worth noting, the Science Building received a new roof, and renovation of the college library was begun. Installation of carpeting in the lobby, suspended ceiling with new lights, and fresh paint were all part of the renovating process.

The agenda for next summer? New light fixtures in Halas and Gallagher Halls and continued work on improvement of the library. A new Core building has been in the planning for several years, but it will probably be some time before such a building can become a reality.

Homecoming Spirit Stands The Test Of Time

Homecomings of the past set the pace for the present-day celebration of Homecoming '87. The first Homecoming, known as Alumni Day, was held in 1919. The featured game, however, was not football as it is today, but rather a baseball game between alumni and a student team. This tradition of baseball ended in 1937 when the first fall homecoming game was played.

Great football seasons of the past would have to include the seasons of 1941 and 1942.

Each team had undefeated seasons against such teams as Indiana State, Butler, and Valparaiso, and Illinois Wesleyan.

1968 marked the first year of the coeducational homecoming. In fact, many considered the dance better than the game, since the Pumas lost to rival Valparaiso. In 1973, St. Joseph's gained national attention when the Administration Building burned, and students worked together to have a successful Homecoming.

This was not the only national exposure for the college, however. "Who ever said that school spirit was dead?" was the title of an article in Sports Illustrated about the '86 Homecoming. It recognized the community spirit of the students and faculty of St. Joseph's when the game had to be moved to Brookside Park due to the flooding of the home field. All worked together to get the park ready for a successful homecoming — success measured in terms of spirited Pumas, and not the loss of the game to Butler.

Therefore the 1987 homecoming game against the Evansville Aces will be remembered as nothing less than exciting as well. The Pumas breezed past the Aces in the first half 32-12.

The second half was a different story, however. Evansville tied the score at 41-41 with 11:58 left in the game. But it was James Toombs who gave the Pumas the advantage when he returned the kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown, making the final score 48-41. Rory Johnson contributed by scoring three TD's and gaining 218 yards on the ground.

SJC was NAIA co-champion in 1957, but this homecoming also marked another first: the first homecoming queen was crowned. Now thirty years later, the tradition continues. The 1987 Homecoming Court included Cheryl Bukowski, Kerin O'Rourke, Natalie Penz, Tricia Szucs, and Queen Maureen Field.

Men's, Women's CC Teams Are Running Strong

The men's and women's cross country teams have been running against some strong competition since early September. the men's won-loss record is not a good indication of their efforts.

In the past they have had more talent and have not run as well. Coach Smith feels they have improved more than any other team in the past. Leading the way, Junior Bill Massoels has done a good job. Freshman Sean Marcum is impressive in his first year of college running. Senior Mark Boyle has shown steady improvement through each meet. Senior Mike Boyda has been out sick, but Smith hopes to have him back and ready to go by conference. Rounding out the men's team are Senior Mike Shirky and Freshman Pat McQuinn.

The women's team is undefeated thus far in the season. Smith, who coaches both teams, feels the numbers four, five, and six runners are running strong but feels numbers one, two and three runners are not running as well as they could. He would like to get them to run up to their capabilities. Junior Lisa Bishop, the number four runner, has been sick but Smith feels she will be a strong fourth runner. Junior Karen Deno has been a big asset to the team. Sophomore Heidi Owens is running well and did so at Manchester. Seniors Theresa Kl- ingenberger and Jackie Regnier and Junior Karen Austin need to try to improve by the conference meet.

The conference meet figures to be a battle between the women from Ashland who have won every year so far and the women from Saint Joe, who have finished second every year.

The Rec-fest Of Champions ...

Contrary to popular belief, the Merlini Thrashers and the Squakees are not ancient Indian tribes, but the names of two of the Rec-fest teams.

Every Wednesday night, while some students may be watching "Wheel of Fortune" and indulging in junk food, others are participating in one-night coed tournaments. Earlier in the day, hopeful teams call in their roster to the facility coordinator, Associate Head Basketball coach Larry Cox. By the time 6:30 p.m. rolls around, the Hanson Recreational Center is filled with enthusiastic students who are ready for action.

This year marks the second anniversary of Rec-fest, which was inspired by Athletic Director Bill Hogan's idea for a one-night tournament. Its success is due to its wide variety of activities which try to appeal to everyone.

Rec-fest offers everything from team handball to volleyball, and nerf football. Additional sports include: basketball, soccer, tennis, dodgeball, kickball, and whiffleball.

Rec-fest officially began on September 2, and continues through November 4. According to Cox, if participation remains strong, the event could be extended into a second session, which would repeat the events.

Although the Rec-fest was established as a fun, harmless festivity, some say that the competition is taken seriously, and that some teams are "out to kill." However, according to Cox, "I think everyone has a good time."

Notice ...

On Monday, October 26 Naval officials will be visiting the Saint Joe campus. They will be administering the ASTB, a test for programs for possible officer candidates after graduation. The test will be given in Halleck Center. Reservations can be made by calling 317-743-8658 or contacting Mrs. Reagan.

Kathy Szezepkowski goes up for the kill as Heather Dunbar looks on as the Lady Pumas were defeated by IPFW.

SJC Students Find Goals In Hollywood

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Seven St. Joseph's College radio-television students gained a clearer idea of career goals and experienced life in the television and film production industries here Aug. 15-22 during the Media Workshop.

Fred Berger, assistant professor of communications, accompanied the students, who resided at UCLA, visited studio lots, television production facilities and live tapings, and were addressed by leaders in the entertainment industry.

Berger and the students visited 20th Century Fox, MGM-Lorimar, ABC Television, and Sunset-Gower Studios, the former Columbia Pictures lot.

Theodore J. Schmitt, a 1966 graduate and senior vice president for acquisitions and program development at MCA Home Video in Universal City, Calif., met with the SJC group and told them about the home video industry and its relationship with the theatrical production divisions at the major film studios.

"Ted was impressive in his ability to relate his occupation and success to his college experience at Saint Joseph's, and the students enjoyed the discussion," Berger said.

Other workshop highlights were lunch at the MGM commissary; a talk by Mark Rothman, creator of "Laverne and Shirley;" and an historical tour of "Old Hollywood." Berger, who has spent parts of the last three summers in Los Angeles, organized this tour.

During the workshop, Berger lectured on "The History of Hollywood and the Studio System," and gave historical perspectives on each of the studio visits. Jeff Cole, executive director of the workshop, has asked Berger to become a staff member of future summer college workshops.

Saint Joseph's participating students continued their experience when they returned to college this semester. The group is writing and producing a third episode of a situation-comedy developed by the 1986 workshop participants; production is scheduled to begin in November.

Saint Joseph's students were among 87 who attended this workshop and Berger says plans are being made for a group from Saint Joseph's to attend again next year. The group also is studying ways to market the scripts they have developed in the past two years.

This year's SJC participants were: Joe Biletz (junior, radio-television major, Cleveland, Ohio), Mary Beth Donnelly (sophomore, communications and theater arts, St. Charles, IL.), Matt Kiley (junior, communications and theater arts, Marion, IN.), Victoria Munk (sophomore, radio-television, Kalamazoo, Mich.), Andy Poletto (junior, mathematics, Clinton, IN.), Bill Quinn (sophomore, radio-television, Chicago, IL.), and Kristina Schubach (senior, communications and theater arts, Indianapolis, IN.).

Paramount Studios was one of many sites included in Berger's tour of Hollywood.

Walk-A-Thon Considered A Big Success

Many times the Saint Joseph's students have been described as "apathetic." However, this was not the case on September 19, when a number of Pumas took part in the first SJC co-sponsored 10-kilometer walk-a-thon. According to chairman Don Reichert, "The students were great, and did so much. Not only did they participate in the walk, but some gave out balloons and 230 gave up their 'cafeteria' numbers. They were super."

There were particular goals set for this walk. "We wanted to raise the community's awareness about the needs of the chronically mentally ill to raise money for both advocacy and research," said Reichert.

Many organizations participated in the event. Among these included Campus Ministry and the Education Club of St. Joe's, who coordinated many aspects of the Walk-a-thon.

When the event was over, over $3,000 was raised for the mentally ill. Prizes were given to individuals who collected the most money, and a picnic was organized for the walkers. Because this year's Walk-a-thon was considered a success, plans are being made to make it an annual event.
